Workers Archive

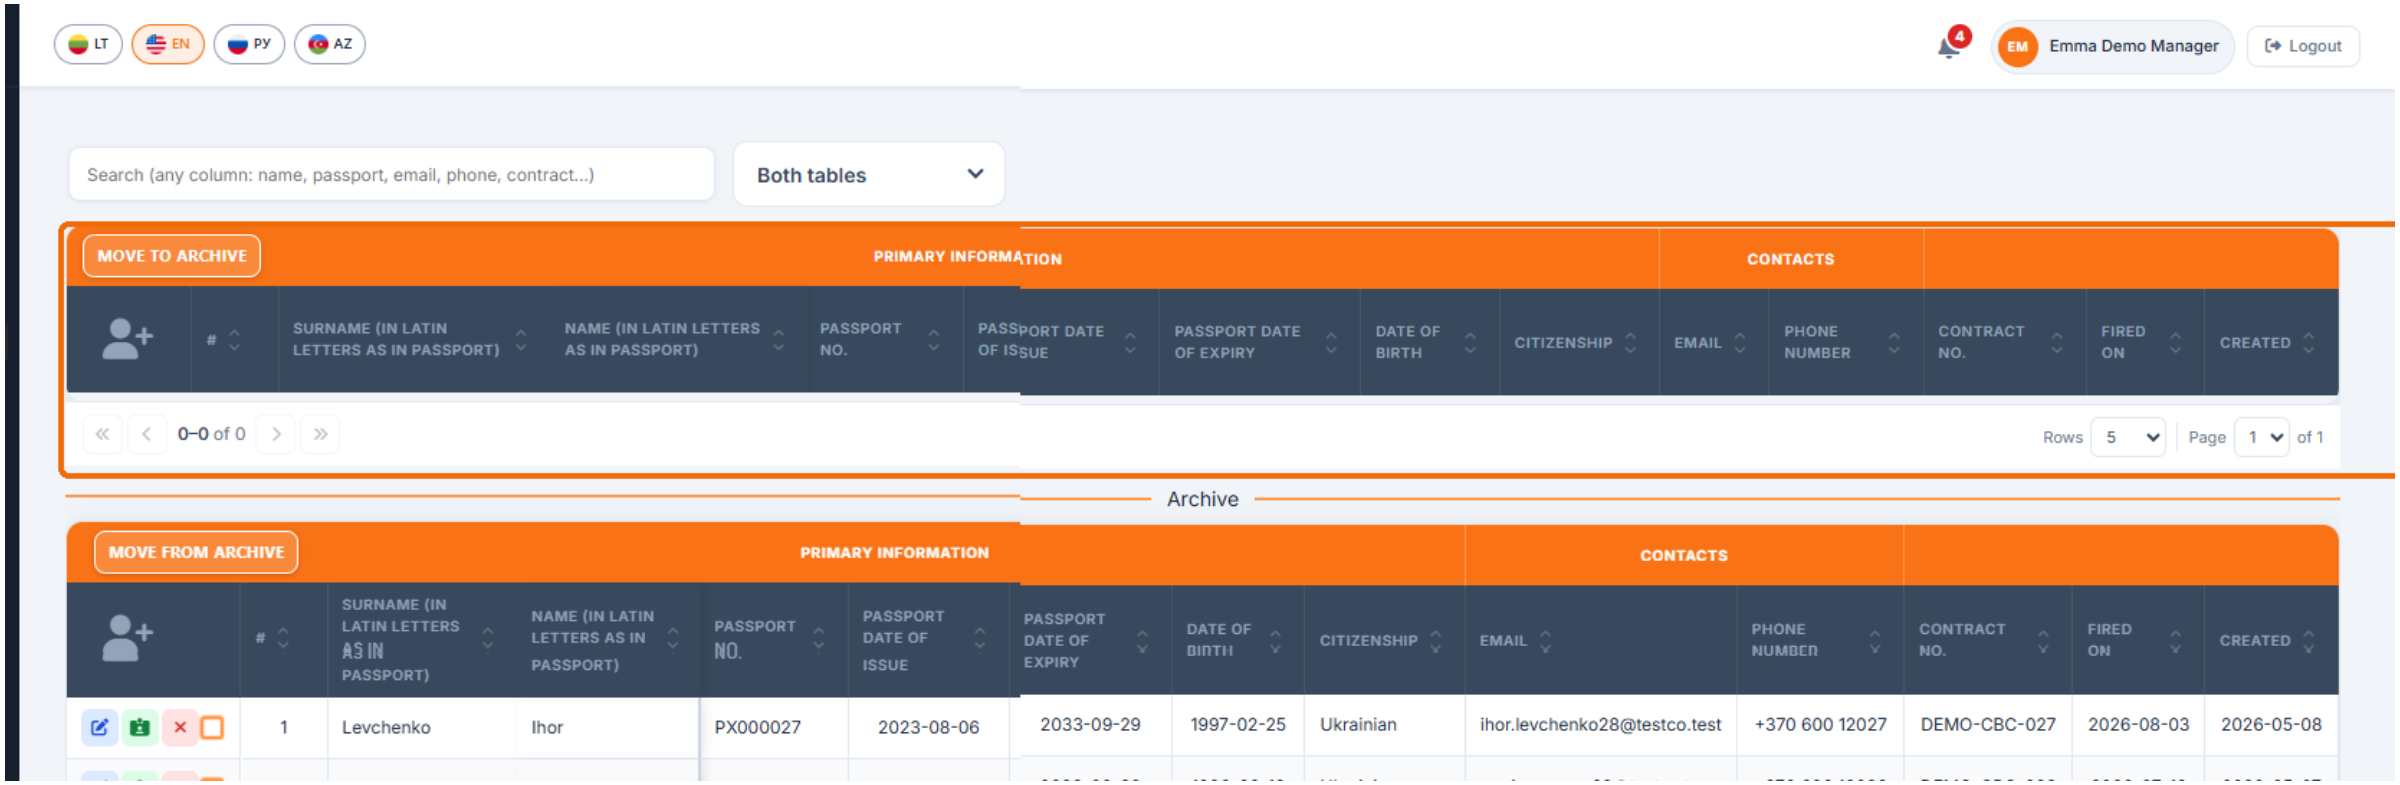

Two tables on one page

Open Archive > Workers Archive. The page has two tables with the same columns. The upper table lists workers who already have a Fired on date but are still in the active database. The lower table, under the Archive divider, lists workers that have been moved to the archive. Both tables show primary information, contacts, contract number, Fired on and Created dates.

Dismissed workers wait here

Workers are not archived automatically. When a Fired on date is entered on a worker's card, the worker shows up in the upper table so the office can review the record first. In this example the upper table is empty (0 of 0), which means every dismissed worker has already been archived.

Move to the archive

Tick the checkbox at the start of each row you want to archive, then press MOVE TO ARCHIVE in the orange header. The selected workers are copied to the archive with their history, their employment is deactivated and they disappear from the active lists. Check the selection before pressing the button, because the move runs immediately.

Search both tables

The search box filters both tables at once and matches any column: surname, name, passport number, email, phone, contract number and more. Here, typing Mazur leaves one archived worker. The search is kept in the address bar, so the filtered view can be bookmarked or reloaded. Clear the box to show all records again.

Choose what to show

The selector next to the search box switches the view. Both tables shows the full page. Only Workers shows the dismissed workers waiting to be archived, and Only Archive shows the archive alone. A single table shows 10 rows per page instead of 5, which is handy when you work through a long list.

To bring a worker back, for example when they are hired again, tick their rows in the archive table. The checkbox turns dark when it is selected. Then press MOVE FROM ARCHIVE. The workers and their history are moved back to the active database and leave the archive. Untick a box to remove a row from the selection.

Open the worker card

Each row starts with three action buttons. The green card button opens Worker details, a read-only summary with the contract number, primary information, passport data, citizenship, family status, language level, clothing sizes and profession. Close it with the × button in the orange header.

Correct archived data

Use the blue edit button when an archived record needs a correction. The Edit worker form holds all stored fields, including Are you currently employed, Fired on, citizenship and passport data. Scroll to the bottom and press Submit to save, or close the form with × to discard your changes.

Workers Archive

Delete permanently

The red × button opens Confirm deletion with the worker's name. DELETE removes the record permanently and it cannot be restored, so use it only for records that must not be kept. BACK TO LIST closes the dialog without changes. Warning: archiving is usually the safer choice, because an archived worker can be restored later.
